BY BAYARD TAYLOR.
 [At the meeting of the Aryan Literary Society of the West Chester State Normal School, on October 22, the following poem by Bayard Taylor was read, it having been sent to the society by Mrs. Taylor, and which has never been before published. The subject of the poem is an old horse which died on the farm of Mr. Taylor's father, in Kennet, when Bayard was a young man.]

Farwell, old friend!—forgotten though so long,
 By whatsoever phantom horses feign
 To summon them away, thy will was strong, Thy spirit willing with us to remain.

Always to own thee was our fond surmise,
 So seemed thy life to burn with endless wick,
 By the pale change with the glow-worm eye,
 Hath dealt the speeding past, his fatal kick.

Now ended is thy double life; no more Shall stifling snows move thy youthful heels.
 Nor thou from hatter slipped, and stable door,
 Thy colthood counterfeited with aged squeals.

No more, to scrape the burden of the day, Thy sham of lameness through its trick endeavors,
 Nor when detected, bring'st thou into play,
 Thy talking tail and pantomimic ears.

No more, spite blows, shalt thou refuse to budge,
 If some security of harness fall;
 Thou dost respect me, but thou wert the judge
 When way was rough and darkness hid the trail.

And if, old friend, thou hadst so many a plan, To shun the service which thou needest most bear,
 Therein wert thou no more nor less than man,
 Labor to the was anything but prayer.

If, also, as fantastic souls assert,
 I was thy god, I surely had from thee
 The average, unto his, of man's desert.
 And pity, love and pardon, even as He.

For I may dream, fidelity like thine
 May save some essence in thee from decay.
 That, not neglected by the Soul Divine, Thy being rises on some unknown way.

Some intermediate heaven, where fields are fresh,
 And golden stables littered deep with fern, Where fade the wrongs that horses knew in flesh.

And all the joy that horses felt return;
 Where bill shall come and lay his neck above Thine own in greeting, with quick, glad some neighs.

And Picket wag his tail in graver love,
 And Heppo bound, as in the old days,
 —West Chester Village Record.

Winter in Colorado.
 The snow lies deep upon the ground,
 The birds sing sweetly in the trees,
 The scent of roses all around
 Is borne upon the icy breeze.

Upon each irrigating stream
 The skating youth indulge in play, While women folk, like fairies, beam
 In summer hats and white Poky.

The plumber taps the pipe that's froze,
 And tears up ceiling, sand and floor,
 While round about the ice-man goes
 And leaves his chattels at our door.

This man, with frozen hands and feet,
 Is hurried off and put to bed;
 Another, prostrate by the heat,
 Wears cabbage leaves upon his head.

Thus speeds the winter in our State—
 A batch of contradictions rude;
 And we assign our varying fate
 To this peculiar altitude.

Throw Physic to the Dogs.
 Take the open air,
 The more you take the better;
 Follow nature's laws
 To the very letter.

Let the doctors go
 To the Bay of Biscay;
 Let alone the gin,
 The brandy and the whisky.

Freely exercise,
 Keep your spirits cheerful;
 Let no dream of sickness
 Make you ever fearful.

Eat the simplest food,
 Drink the pure cold water;
 Then you will be well,
 Or at least you ought to.

How Poor Boys May Become Successful Men.
 You want some good advice. It has ruined many a man, but may not harm you, because you will not follow it.

Rise early, be abstemious; be frugal, attend to your own business, and never trust it to another; be not afraid to work, and diligently, too, with your own hands; treat everyone with civility and respect; good manners ensure success; accomplish what you undertake; decide, then persevere; diligence and industry overcome all difficulties; never be mean—rather give than take the odd shilling; never postpone till tomorrow what can be done to-day; never anticipate wealth from any source but labor; honesty is not only the best policy, but the only policy; commence at the first round and keep climbing; make your word as good as your bond; seek knowledge to plan, enterprise to execute, honesty to govern all; never trade beyond your stock, never give to large a credit; time is money; make few promises; keep your secrets; live within your income; sobriety above all things; luck is a word that does not apply to a successful man; not too much caution—slow but sure is the thing; the highest monuments are built piece by piece; step by step we mount the pyramids; be bold—be firm when the clouds gather; difficulties are surmounted by opposition; self-confidence, self-reliance is your capital; your conscience is the best monitor; never be over-sanguine;
 but don't underrate your own abilities; don't be discouraged, ninety-nine may say so, the hundredth, yes; take off your coat, roll up your sleeves, don't be afraid of manual labor; America is large enough for all; the best letter of introduction is your own energy; lean on yourself when you walk; keep good company; the Spaniards say if you down with dogs you will get up with fleas; keep out of politics, unless you are sure to win; you are never sure to win, so keep out.
